Re: Moral Failure

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Some church leaders are not vaccinated and boosted for COVID. People tend to follow examples set by their church leaders. It is silly to intentionally have coronavirus spreading events every week.

The cost-benefit analysis does not pan out. I urge our leaders to consider whether a decision to spread coronavirus is worth the cost. The benefits, if any, do not outweigh the cost. I question whether there is any social benefit to spreading coronavirus.

On some Sundays half the congregation is missing, due to sickness I presume. It would make as much sense to drink antifreeze and wait for divine intervention to save us from our own poor and stubborn decisions. I encourage our leaders to think about the examples they set.

Thank you for your time.
